

Tombstone Tumbleweed

Thursday, August 5, 2004

CHD VOLUNTEERS SAVE 4 MORE JOBS FOR CITIZENS, AND STOP 4 MORE POTENTIAL CRIMINALS AND TERRORISTS

By Chris Simcox

Four more illegals were found hiding in the bushes 25 miles north of the border last Friday afternoon. They were waiting for their ride to a town near you.

A documentary crew from New York caught the entire episode on film, including when a rookie Border Patrol concerned that we had violated their precious civil rights. He could not even speak Spanish well enough to question the group. We gave them water and watched over them while he questioned the film crew if we held them at gun point, if we gave them any direct orders or if we abused them in any way.

When the agent began asking for more personal information from volunteers I firmly reminded him that the four people sitting on the ground were his responsibility. I reminded him that he works for me, a citizen of the United States, and I demanded he take charge of the group and leave us alone. he finally did his job and we went on our way.